“The New Institutional Behaviouralism: Theory and Empirical Examples”

March and Olsen’s pathbreaking 1984 article launched an institutionalist wave in political science as well as political sociology. Nearly forty years later, we are now in the midst of a behavioralist wave. The question for us now is whether this will be a reverse wave or a wave forward that unites the insights of the institutionalist and behavioralist perspectives. This lecture will focus on both classical theory and contemporary examples to argue for the great potential inherent in synthesizing these approaches.

4:30–5:00 p.m.
